The Legend of the Baths.

A King of Constantinople had, so the history tells us, a daughter whose beauty, grace and virtues were of that su-perialive character peculiar to heroines of the Middle Ages, but who was afflicted with a sickness upon which all the medical skill of Byzantium could make no impression. The faculty, nonpulsaed, acted very much as it is wont to act under similar circumstances in these modern times, and got rid of an obstinate patient that would neither get well nor die, by recommending change of air. Dagh-Hamman, as it is now called, was the spot selected for the princess, and there the king built a palace for her reception, and in that palace she took up her above, an' breathed the mountain air and drank the mountain water, but without deriving any advantage from one or the other. One day, however, the princess was indulging in the favorite pastime of Coustantinople young ladies, looking out of the window, when she saw a bear; no very ususual occurrence, but this bear truck the princess by his re-markably dejected aspect. The prinmarkably dejected aspect. cess' sympathies gushed forth at once, and she drew a parallel between the woe-begone animal and herself.

"There," said she to herself, "is a bear that possesses all the requisite elements for being a very nice and a very happy hear, but he isn't; far from it; his fur is ragged, his skin is mangy, his bones are nearly through it; he has not an atom of bear's grease about him, and his doleful expression of counten ance shows a lowness of spirits equal to my own. Like myself, that bear is a con irmed invalid."

Thus soliloquizing, the princess watched the movements of the bear, and re-marked that he went and plunged into a pool of mud, after rolling in which for a space of time he got out, sat down at the edge of the pool, rested, and then plunged again; and after going through the ritual several times, with precision and solemnity, withdrew to the mountain. Next day the bear came again, and the next after that, and so on for several days, until at last the princess began to notice a change in his person-al appearance. His hide was it as patchy his countenance more cheerful, and his step more blithe.

Day by day the improvement continued; sleekness, obviously induced by a pientiful secretion of the potent grease. came over the ragged fur; it lost its rusty color, curied abundantly over a healthy skin, and at length the once nesancholy object stood a regenerate bear, sound in body and happy in mind. Then he came no more to the pool.

Pondering over these things, the princess came to the conclusion that if rolling in the mud brought back health to an apparently worn-out bear, it could do no less for an invalid princess. So Now is your Time—A Small Sum of Money will Buy a Large Quantity of her highness took a preliminary roll, and, finding it warm and on the whole and, and, she built herself a bathing house around the pool, and, daily initating the bear, was at the end of two months restored to perfect health. Then the king, her father, to comm-morate the event, built public baths there, and from generation to generation the fame of the springs of Dagh-Hammam have come down to the present day. There is a certain resemblance between the legend attaching to these mineral springs and to that of King Bladud's pigs, which is associated with the chaly-brate springs of Bath, in England. In of sentiment, bowever, that of point Dagh-Hamm so has perhaps the advan-tage, a sickly bear being on the whole a less pro-sic object than a herd of diseased pigs. The waters of Kourou and of Dagh-Hammam are composed, in great part, of chlosulphuric salts and hydrosulnhuric gas, and enjoys a deserved repu-tation for efficacy in situ disease and theumatic affections. Not far from the springs are some interesting ruins, which are doubtless those of the hospital and priace described by the old Byzantine historian as having been con-structed in this neighborhood by Con-stantine and his empress, Helena.

A Down Easter believes there is nothing like advertising. He lost his pock-et book recently, advertised his loss in the local newspaper, and next morning wert down into his own cellar and found it on the floor.

Two M lesians were standing at the Pairmount water-works, watching the hig wheels splashing the water, when one of them remarked: "Mike, isn't this a quare country, where they have to grind it before they can use it?"

A Detroit paper, noticing the fact that a man lately dropped dead while combing his hair, says, "And yet there are people who will persist in this dan-gerous habit."

"Boy, is this a licensed dog?" asked a Detroit policeman. "No," said the youngster, "he's a rat terrier dog, and I'm taking him down to have his teeth filed." "I say," said a rough fellow to a fop with conspicuous how legs, "I say, don't you have to have your pantaloons cut with a circular saw?"

An experienced old gentlemen says that all that is necessary in the enjoyment of love or sausages is confidence.

Notice is hereby given, That I have leaned to George Rebrig one pair of Mules, and her by forbid all persons to meddle with the same.

A Drummer in a crape. At Big Creek, A kansas, they have a peculiar facilion which sometimes proves embarrassing. As there is no preacher within thirty miles, the way for marry-ing is by kissing across the table. Re-cently a New York drummer was out there. He put up at a priva e house, and became quite intinate. One evening he was fooling around one of the girls, generally trying the extent of her sweet temper, when she gave his whiskers a pull and ran. He followed. Sie cut the table between them. got the table between them. He chased her around it several times. When out of breath he stopped on the other side, making a wild plunge, caught her is his arms, and gave her a hearty kiss. She then sat down upon the sofa, and they taiked pleasantly for a couple of hours —he thinking it singular that she should sit up so late.

At last she said, "Don't you think its about time we went to bed?

"I guess you are right," he remark-l; "let's go." She lit a candle, and he was about to do the same, when she said,

"I reckon one's enough—one candle will light two tolks to bed." "Undoubtedly it would, when those two persons occupy the same room. But your candle won't filumine my

the table? That married us."
A cold sweat swept over the drummer He knew that if he said he wasn't mar-ried to her she would make an outery, and then her loving and much tobacco-consuming father would arise in his wrath and carve him into cutlets, and her brothers would bring down their shot-guns and empty the contents late him. He must be strategic. He must put her off. So he said:

"Fairest of your sex, permit me to remark that I did not know that kissing across the table constituted a marriage ceremony. But I am content. I have never seen one who so completely filled my ideal of a beautiful, sweet, loving and nodest woman. However, I would never think of holding you to this mar-riage until I had asked the permission of your father to pay my addresses to you. To morrow, at dinner, when all the family are posent, I will propose for your fair hand."

This satisfied the lady, and, after bestowing upon him a fervent kiss, she went to her room, and he went to his. He packed his carpet-ong, took off his boots, and made tracks for the nearest railroad station. He didn't feet enfirely sale until he reached St. Louis. He hasn't informed his wife of this little adventure. He's attaid she might write out to Arkansas for the facts in the case. Women sometimes won't its-ten to reason, you know.
